In solemn reflection, I bid farewell to a legacy not of a life lost, but of a discipline deeply lived—political science, polity, and constitutional studies have not merely been my profession, but my unwavering compass. With rigorous scholarship and strategic foresight, I have decoded the complexities of governance, institutional frameworks, and democratic processes with precision and clarity. My work stands as testimony to a relentless pursuit of constitutional integrity and policy acumen. In this domain, I did not follow the discourse—I shaped it. And though this chapter may close, the impact endures, waiting to be summoned again by those who seek excellence.

IMPACT OF TECHNOLOGY ON THE VOTING PROCESS

*Dr. Rekha Bhadrassen

ABSTRACT

In India the robust electoral machinery and the processes have ably been aided and strengthened by technology. A major push to use of technology in the Indian elections came with the use of electronic voting machines (EVMs). It entirely disrupted the way the elections were conducted. Use of EVMs was not simply the replacement of sturdy ballot boxes and ballot papers. It was a paradigm shift for everyone including the political parties, candidates and the voters. With introduction of EVMs, booth capturing in its traditional sense of the term lost its sheen. The muscle power at the local level could not guarantee conversion of physical booth capturing into votes polled in favour of a particular candidate. The premium carried by the local muscle power on the polling day reduced drastically. The political parties accordingly moved as far as selection of candidates and use of the muscle power was concerned. The use of EVMs proved boon for the election personnel also. Conducting elections used to be round the clock strenuous nightmarish exercise beginning from cleaning of the ballot boxes to counting of votes running over a few days. The last minute wrangling over doubtful votes till declaration of results used to be terrible experience. The present study is fetching the real scenerio of this new voting process.

Key words: electronic voting machines, technological aspects

1.INTRODUCTION

India, world's largest democracy is home to more than 922 million voters with such myriad geographical, topographical, ethnic diversities. Working with a premise of 'No Voter to be Left Behind' in its connection, ECI has fulfilled its mandate with perfection, precision and as per timelines set forth under the constitutional prescription for over seven decades of glorious journey of elections in India. Since its inception, innovation and integration of state-of-the-art technology has been an essential part of the journey of elections in the country. The commission has leveraged technology in every stage of the election process to enhance the efficiency and efficacy of the service delivery systems. The decade of the 1980s witnessed the first major step in the introduction of technology in the electoral process. In 1982, Electronic Voting Machines (EVMs) were first introduced on an experimental basis for Bye-Election in an Indian State (Kerala). This started on hand, the process of testing and acceptability of the technological aspects of these machines and how they could make the voting and the counting process efficient and accurate. The first two decades of the 21st century have seen progressive integration of IT and ICT enabled systems in Indian Elections. The Commission has leveraged technology options especially the digital technology in its run up to the 17th General Election in a big way. Over the last decade, Use of technology has paved a way for new avenues of voter facilitation & making

Socio Economic Significance of Reservation Policy in India

Dr. Rekha Bhadransen

Professor

Department of ART

RKDF University, Bhopal, India

Abstract— Caste system with its inhuman practices has been with us for the last two thousand years. It has shaped the fate of millions of people. The caste system gives different experiences to different people. It gives someone pride and happiness but to someone it gives utmost pain and shame. If one experiences pain or joy out of the caste system, depends upon where he or she belongs to the social hierarchy of the caste system. The disparity in the implementation of reservation policy for SCs has come about into serious economic consequences, which are firmly associated with their life. Even following 59 years of Independence, the reservation status of SCs in all Government branches has been unsuitable. The reservation policy has been underutilized. An In spite of Constitutional provision, the reservation policy has been neglected. he plans for socio-economic upliftment of sterilization laborers/foragers and their reliant's should be promoted.

Keywords— Reservation Policy, Socio Economic, Caste System

I. INTRODUCTION

The magnificence of India is profoundly squashed and defaced by the heaviness of rank framework that partitions individuals into great many positions. India, the second biggest populated country on the planet, is a historical center of ranks. Every standing keeps a given financial order as for each and every rank in the position family of Hindu religion. Every station makes a position domain in which their individuals wed one another and disallow pariahs from having any marriage partnership with them. Position framework keeps up with its immaculateness by forestalling inter caste marriage. Every rank has a power structure that assists it with keeping up with their overall power position in the position framework.

Monetary, social and political is force of every standing increment as they climb on the stepping stool of social ordered progression that is the special component of the position framework in India. Every station maintains a social separation from each and every station to keep up with its social power and legendary qualification. As per Brahmanic conviction, from the mouth of the Virat, the early stage man, Brahmin is conceived, from the hands of the Virat, kshatriyas are conceived, from the thighs of the Virat, Vaisyas are conceived and from the feet of the Virat "the sudras are conceived. Brahmins are the holy class and they possess the primary spot in the social stepping stool. The Kshatriyas follow them and they possess the second spot in the power construction of the conventional Indian culture. The Vaishyas, the shipper class/positions are only underneath to the Kshatriyas in friendly power. The Sudras are the most reduced gathering in the social stepping stool of Indian Hindu society.

This social bifurcation of Indian culture is famously known as the Varna framework. Varna Framework does exclude all ranks in India. Those ranks which are excluded from any of the previously mentioned Varna framework are dealt with as outcasts. These outcasts are known as the present planned stations. Dr. B.R. Ambedkar called them 'discouraged positions' and M.K. Gandhi called them 'Harijan'. Station framework has denied them monetary assets, political power and social positions. Standing framework has fizzled the financial vertical development of planned station individuals through hundreds of years. They have been generally caught on the non-clever fringe in the Hindu Indian culture. They have been living in the edges of Hindu towns during the last a lot more hundreds of years. In this article, the writer examinations the financial meaning of position reservation imagined in the Indian constitution.

Landlessness, political weakness, financial backwardness and social unapproachability are the signs of the booked position populace in India. The station framework has killed them, stole from their assets, denied them basic freedoms, regarded them as creatures, and kept a relationship with them just however reinforced work. At the point when we know the brutalities the position framework forced upon the booked rank individuals, we would consider how they have endure the barbaric position framework.

On 26th January 1951, India went into a "sovereign, majority rule republic system" and in 1977, by the 42nd amendment of the constitution, expected the state of a "sovereign, communist, common and majority rule republic". Despite the fact that the two words, 'communist and common' were added exclusively in 1977, they were genuinely implanted in the soul of the constitution. 'We, individuals of India', the principal line of the preface of Indian constitution represents the actual soul of Indian constitution-clique among individuals in view of equity, freedom and correspondence for all. The expression 'we, individuals of India' means another verifiable achievement. "We, individuals of India" addresses all individuals of the country independent of their standing, class, orientation, financial, social and political power. The absolute first opening line of the Indian constitution in its preface particularly shows the verifiable change of a nation partitioned by positions and religions into a country in view of popularity based citizenship which is nonpartisan among one's rank, class, orientation, sexuality and monetary
